

ESTABLISHING A LEADERSHIP MODEL

Vantage will help you MORE CLEARLY DEFINE YOUR TALENT NEEDS, consider the important business implications, and create a compelling model that captures what great leadership looks like for your organization.

We will actively engage your senior executives and other key stakeholders in order to identify their perspectives on both the essential and game-changing leadership skills you require for success, and then help build a plan to get you where you need to go.

Our work always begins with a set of deliberately provocative questions: What are the big business challenges and opportunities facing your company...now and for the foreseeable future? In turn, what are the critical implications for leadership? Are you certain that you have the talent you require? If not, what are you going to do about it? These questions tend to test conventional patterns and often lead to meaningful and sustainable breakthroughs in thinking about what exactly you require.

By integrating your input with our thinking about world class leadership, we will draft, for your ratification, a talent framework and strategy that is both practical and aspirational and, most importantly, right for your company.

Questions and answers about the value of establishing a Leadership Model:

Q: Why is having a Leadership Model so important?

A: There are two main reasons why having a model is important:

- It provides a clear, actionable picture of what really matters to leaders and followers alike
- It establishes the foundation around which other processes can be integrated. For example, a Leadership Model provides a framework for:
 - Selection – hiring the best new leaders into the company
 - Performance review – assessing how your leaders are performing
 - Development – helping leaders grow the skills required for success
 - Talent management – assessing the potential of future leaders, building succession plans and identifying talent gaps

Q: What factors contribute to the success of a coaching engagement?

A: Through our extensive experience coaching executives, Vantage has learned that the following key factors increase the likelihood that coaching will deliver a solid economic return:

- The participant should be genuinely open to development and willing to try new behaviors.
- The immediate manager must be fully engaged in the process and willing to give candid feedback and support.
- Coaching objectives must be tailored not only to the organization's needs, culture, and leadership competencies but also to the individual's unique motivation and personality.

Q: How does Vantage look at world class talent, and what are the implications for a Leadership Model?

A: Over the years, we've had the opportunity to establish and research a set of dimensions that we believe distinguish world class leaders from the rest of the pack. These leaders:

- Consistently deliver extraordinary results
- Attract and develop outstanding talent
- Provide impactful, high value thought leadership
- Drive significant enterprise change
- Demonstrate real leadership presence

Q: How can Vantage help us leverage our existing model?

A: We can help you develop and implement:

- A rigorous process that engages your senior team in a thorough consideration of leadership issues, needs and the relevance of your current Leadership Model
- Internal communications to better introduce the Leadership Model and its ramifications to your organization
- Tools, systems, and methods that build capability in those areas targeted by your model

Q: What else should we know about having a Vantage-developed Leadership model?

A: Executive assessment is a core competency of Vantage. Once your leadership model is in place, our assessments will tell you how your applicants or current executives stack up against the leadership dimensions you consider most critical.
