After almost 20 years as an internal practitioner, Susanne Krivanek brought her talent and passion for leadership and organizational development to Vantage in 2017. Susanne has held various leadership roles in a wide-range of companies from Fortune 100s such as Johnson & Johnson and Exelon to private companies, such leading supply chain provider, NFI. Her range of industries is diverse as well, including Pharmaceutical, Utility, Financial Services, Technology, and Supply Chain.

Ms. Krivanek's experience with business operations and strategy has cultivated her ability to create innovative, applicable talent and organizational solutions, which makes her an indispensable asset to her clients. She has helped many organizations and their leaders reach their potential through talent management, assessment, development, coaching, strategic alignment, and cultural transformation. She has been asked to share her innovative approaches at events such as Disrupt HR, the Association for Talent Development (ATD), and the Philadelphia Society for People and Strategy (PSPS). Susanne has also written articles for ATD and the Corporate Learning Network.

Susanne holds an M.B.A. in HR, specializing in Organizational Development, from Temple University and a B.S. in Marketing, focused on International Business, from Rutgers University. She is a Six Sigma Green Belt and a Certified Denison Culture Facilitator, Leadership Coach, and Performance Technologist. In her spare time, she is an adjunct professor for Rutgers University School of Business and enjoys the outdoors, keeping fit, and spending time with her family who reside in the suburbs of Philadelphia, PA.
